He then discussed his observations  He was particularly impressed by the bird and the scale of operations which were being conducted  with a minimum number of people. He indicated that he felt that the program was too austere and that we should make plans for a larger complement and more facilities which would be in keeping with a realistic number of aircraft which might be based there. (This is an ideal time to come forward with the proposal for the expansion of OXCART support.) I also elaborated on the problems which we were having with the A-12 in increasing the performance.

We also reported on the visit  Details of this are covered in a separate memorandum.

3. There was a discussion of the various Special Group items for the Tuesday meeting. The DCI requested information on the status of  and I indicated I would provide this. He also requested a briefing on U-2 availability status in terms of the various requirements which were in the offing. (This was provided Monday afternoon after discussions with OSA and )

4. There was some discussion of Agency relationships with the ACDA. The DCI expressed considerable concern that ACDA was prone to quote people out of context in defending their positions and seemed more interested in moving forward on disarmament regardless of consequences. He was strongly opposed to fulltime assignment of an individual to ACDA, but all agreed on my urging that we should increase our support to disarmament within the Agency since many things were going by default.

5. DCI expressed interest in [Redacted] since this was receiving lots of publicity these days. He requested DD/I conduct a review of status in case we were asked questions.
